This At-Home Activity packet includes two parts, Section 1 and Section 2, each with approximately 10 lessons in it. We recommend that your student complete one lesson each day.

Most lessons can be completed independently. However, there are some lessons that would benefit from the support of an adult. If there is not an adult available to help, don’t worry! Just skip those lessons.

Encourage your student to just do the best they can with this content—the most important thing is that they continue to work on their reading!

Their actions make Madame Charity realize that people can be kind, so she starts acting more kindly, too. Independent Reading!

Use the questions/prompts on the Discourse Card resource to start a conversation about something the student has read. You may talk about a text the student read in one of the lessons above, or anything else the student is reading.

Encourage daily reading. And remember, reading isn’t just about the books on the shelves—it’s about anything around you with letters! Turn on the closed captioning feature on your TV or read catalogs that come in the mail. The backs of cereal boxes work, too, as do directions to board games!

Running out of stuff to read? Grab some sticky notes, and label household objects, or make up new, silly names for things! Communicating with sticky notes, instead of talking, is fun, too—start with a half hour and see if you can go all afternoon. Reading is everywhere!

Don’t worry about right/wrong answers when you talk about text—the important thing is that you and your student share a reading experience and have fun!

Lesson 8
Determining the Central Message

Learning Target
Use the key details and events of a story to figure out the central message, or lesson, that the author wants to share with readers.

Read Many stories have a central message, or lesson, the author wants to share. The story teaches the lesson through the characters, the events that happen, and what the characters learn.

As you read, looking for the key details will help you to find the central message and understand what you read.

Look at the cartoon. Think about a lesson the boy learns by the end.

Don’t let go of me!

I can do it!
Think  The events in the cartoon tell about a problem the boy has and what he does. Complete the chart by adding the key details. Use those details to figure out the central message of the cartoon.

What Is the Central Message?

Talk  Using the key details in the chart, talk about the central message of the cartoon.

Academic Talk

Use these phrases to talk about the text.

One fall afternoon, a girl went to a farm to pick apples. She was in a hurry, so she picked carelessly both ripe apples and unripe ones. When she finished, her wagon was filled with a small mountain of apples.

The girl asked the farmer, "Quick, tell me how long you think it will take me to get back home."

The farmer thought carefully. Then he said, "Be patient. If you go slowly, you will be back soon. If you go fast, you will not get back until night. It's your choice."

The girl thought, "How can that be? How can it take so long if I go fast?"

The girl wanted to get back home as soon as possible, so she rushed her horse and wagon onto the road. She made her horse walk very fast.

And suddenly . . . bump! Off fell some apples.

Every time she hit a bump, more apples rolled off her wagon. Then she had to stop and put them back on the wagon. Because of all the delays, it was night before she got home.
How can key details help you figure out what lesson the girl in the story learns?

1. Complete the chart by writing some key details about what the characters say and do. Then write the central message, or lesson.

   Key Details (the Girl)

   Key Details (the Farmer)

   What Is the Central Message?

2. Think about the message of the story. Talk about what the girl learned.

3. Short Response What is another lesson the girl might learn from what happened? Use the space provided on page 126 to write your answer.

   HINT What might the girl think about the farmer's advice by the end of the story?
Use the space below to write your answer to the question on page 123.

Tools for Instruction

From Retelling to Summarizing

To retell a story, students recall details or events in order. Summarizing also requires students to recall, but it involves greater understanding of the importance of particular events or details. To summarize, students tie together key events and details to form concise statements. Provide practice with this skill by modeling how to consolidate and categorize—for example, replacing pencils, paper, notebooks, folders with the general term school supplies. This skill is central to summarizing, and helps students learn how to eliminate unimportant information and capture the main idea from what remains.

Step by Step  30–45 minutes

1. Introduce and explain summarizing.
   - Introduce summarizing by connecting it to retelling, a skill students have already learned to do. Say, When you retell a story, you tell details and events in the order they happened.
   - Demonstrate a retelling by recounting the details from a classroom activity that took place earlier in the day.

   This morning I had you all sit on the rug for our morning meeting. We sat in a circle, and we talked about today's weather, and Josh asked a question about snowflakes. Then we talked about the book that we were going to read during story time, and Marissa and Evan shared stories that were related to the topic of the book.

   - Then say, You can use what you know about retelling to summarize. When you summarize, you tell about the details, just like with retelling. But you make it much shorter by only telling the most important details.
   - Use the same information from the retelling to summarize.

   This morning we gathered for our morning meeting. We talked about today's weather and about the book that we were going to read later on at story time.

2. Model summarizing text.
   - Say, Summarizing is a good way to remember what you read. Let's summarize a story together. Then read aloud a story, such as A Bargain for Frances, by Russell Hoban.
   - As you read, pause occasionally to model how you summarize.

   Frances is on her way to Thelma's, and she is taking her dolls. She sings a silly song along the way. These are interesting details, but I'm not sure I need to remember them all. Since they're all about Frances going to Thelma's, I can summarize these two pages like this: Frances is going to play at Thelma's.

   - Record and display summary statements as you generate them.

Support English Learners  Summarizing requires that students understand how ideas and details are connected, which requires some background knowledge. Try to select texts that match students' background knowledge, and fill in gaps as needed.
Provide guided practice with summarizing text.
- Continue reading, and pause to engage students in summarizing with you. Focus attention on specific summarizing skills, such as combining related information.

  Thelma offers to sell Frances her cups and saucers, sugar bowl, cream pitcher, and teapot. This is a long list to remember! When readers summarize, they think about how lists like this are related. Think about how these things Thelma is selling are alike. What is a name we can give them? (tea set) So how can we summarize this page? (Thelma offers to sell Frances her tea set.)

- Continue to record summary statements.
- When you have finished reading, read the summary statements in order for a summary of the entire story.

Provide repeated practice with summarizing text.
- Use additional read alouds to provide frequent practice with summarizing.
- Provide these question prompts to help students transfer summarizing to independent reading.
  - What are the most important things about ____________?
  - What's interesting about ____________ but not so important?
  - Can you think of one word to describe ____________, ____________, and ____________?
  - What is a shorter way to tell what happened when ____________?

Connect to Writing Have students divide a sheet of paper into as many boxes as chapters in the book, or into three sections for beginning, middle, and end. As they read independently or listen to read alouds, have students draw and/or write the most important ideas, one per box.

Sharing the Crops

Once a farmer rented some land. "How much does it cost to use this land?" the farmer asked the landowner.

The owner wanted to get the better part of the deal. So he said, "I'll take the top half of the crop, and you can take the bottom half."

But the farmer was clever. He planted potatoes because they grow in the ground. At harvest time, he gave the owner the potato tops, which are not good for anything.

The owner knew he had been outsmarted. He said, "Next year, I want the bottom half of your crops."

So the next year the farmer planted oats, which grow at the top of long grasses. The bottom half is useless grassy straw. That's what the farmer gave to the owner.

This time the owner said, "Next year, I'll take the top and the bottom. You can have the middle."

So this time, the farmer planted corn. At the top of each corn stalk are tassels. At the bottom are woody stalks. In the middle is where the tasty sweet corn grows.

For a third time, the owner had been outsmarted. Now it was the farmer's turn to suggest a deal. "From now on," he said, "why don't you take half of whatever I grow? Whatever I get, you will get the same."

This was a fair deal at last. From that day on, the owner and the farmer shared the crops equally.

Close Reader Habits

Why does the landowner keep changing the deal he made with the farmer? Underline the key details about the first deal between the landowner and the farmer.

A  It is wrong to try to cheat others.

A  “Once a farmer rented some land.”
B  “The owner wanted to get the better part of the deal.”

Long ago, there was a gentle donkey named Zel. Everyone in town loved Zel because she was so pleasant and kind. But Zel’s owner, Madame Charity, was angry and mean. She was so mean that she threw rocks at birds for singing too loud. She yelled at little boys when they laughed. But she was the meanest of all to poor Zel.

Every Saturday, Madame Charity sold sugar and rice at a market. Whoever arrived earliest sold the most. But Madame Charity always woke up late. Then she got angry and yelled at Zel, who had done nothing wrong.

In a huff, Madame Charity would then load heavy bags of rice and sugar onto Zel’s back. Last, she climbed on top of it. “Hurry, Zel!” she yelled. “Get me to market as fast as you can!” Although Zel always trotted as fast as she could, it was never fast enough for Madame Charity.
One day, Zel's friend Touloulou the crab visited. "Did you have a good day at the market?" asked Touloulou.

"Madame Charity was mad at me all day. I work as hard as I can, but she is always mean to me."

"Madame Charity is always late. She won't blame herself, so she blames you," said Touloulou.

"Yes," said Zel. "And because everyone is afraid of her angry tongue, she never sells much at the market."

"I will help you," said Touloulou.

The next Saturday, Madame Charity woke up at 9 a.m. "Oh, no! I'm late again!" she yelled. As she tossed her heavy bags onto Zel's back, Touloulou the crab grabbed onto the hem of her long skirt. Madame Charity climbed on Zel's back. Touloulou held tightly to her skirt.
10 Zel started trotting. Madame Charity remembered how late she was. She opened her mouth to speak angrily, but Touloulo pinched her ankle.
11 “Ouch!” Madame Charity rubbed her ankle. She forgot how late she was. But soon she remembered. “Faster, Zel! Faster!” she yelled.
12 Again Touloulo pinched Madame Charity’s ankle.
13 “Ouch!” shouted Madame Charity.
14 When they got to the market, Madame Charity saw that someone had taken the stall she liked to use. In a fit of rage, Madame Charity opened her mouth to yell. For the third time, Touloulo pinched her ankle. Madame Charity screamed.
15 “What’s wrong?” people asked.
16 “Hurrying to get to market, I must have hurt my ankle. It’s very painful. Ouch! Ouch! Ouch!”
17 The fish seller said, “Madame Charity, you should get up earlier. Then you will not have to rush. Next week, I will wake you at 6 a.m.”
18 “Thank you,” said Madame Charity. She was surprised at the man’s kindness.
19 “Let me fix your ankle,” said the fruit seller. In the past, the fruit seller had not talked to Madame Charity. Today he felt sorry for her.
20 When Madame Charity saw how kind everyone was, she smiled. For the first time, she sold all of her rice and sugar. At the end of the day, she saddled Zel gently and rode quietly home.
21 From that day on, Madame Charity tried not to raise her voice in anger. Sometimes she got angry, but she kept it to herself. And Zel the gentle donkey was happy at last.

Learning Target

Explain why understanding the central message of a story will help you understand the text you read.
Determine Message, Lesson, or Moral

An important part of reading development is recognizing that a story is likely to convey a message or lesson, and learning how to read closely to determine it. Some stories teach a lesson explicitly, while other stories have lessons that are implied. Determining an implied lesson can be hard for readers because it requires them to go beyond retelling events to more sophisticated skills, such as analyzing details and making inferences. When teaching students how to determine the message, lesson, or moral of a story, it is helpful to use stories with stated and unstated morals so that students can gain confidence in finding the message as they progress from concrete to abstract thinking.

Three Ways to Teach

Analyze a Stated Message, Lesson, or Moral 20-30 minutes

Scaffold students’ ability to determine the message in any story by analyzing stories with stated messages. Help them think about the way the author uses details and shapes events in order to teach a lesson.

- Choose a brief fable—a story with an explicitly stated moral—and read it aloud. Then model for students how to identify the moral and think about how the details in the story point to the lesson readers should learn. The following example is based on Aesop’s “The Boy Who Cried Wolf.”

In a fable, we are told the story’s lesson at the very end. The lesson is called a moral. So what is the moral of this story? The last line says, “Nobody believes a liar, even when he is telling the truth!” Let’s think about how the details in the story make this lesson clear. We read that the boy was bored and that he lied about seeing the wolf to amuse himself. We also read that the villagers were very upset that they had been tricked, especially the second time. When the boy really sees a wolf, nobody believes him. These details match the moral stated at the end, that “nobody believes a liar.” No one in the village trusted the boy because of his lies.

- Distribute and display Message, Lesson, or Moral Chart (page 3), and work together to record details from the story on the chart. Explain to students that the chart is a useful way for them to see how details are connected to one moral or big idea.

- Then provide a selection of other fables for students to practice with independently. Have students work in pairs to read a fable and identify its moral, stated at the end. Have them use the message, lesson, or moral chart to connect story details to the overall lesson. Remind them to think carefully about characters’ words and actions, as well as what happens and why.

- Invite pairs to share their work with the class.
Determine an Unstated Message, Lesson, or Moral
10–15 minutes

As students begin to read chapter books, teach them how to think about details and events in order to figure out the lesson the author wants readers to learn.

Choose a section from a current story, or reflect on an entire story that students have recently finished reading. Say, The author uses the key events in the story to show readers what can happen as a result of certain choices. The author expects us, as readers, to think about what we can learn from these events. Then model how to determine an unstated message by asking questions about what you read. The following example is based on Charlotte’s Web, by E. B. White.

- What decision did Charlotte make? (to write a message in her web)
- Why did she make it? (to help save Wilbur from slaughter)
- What happened because of that decision? (Wilbur was chosen for the fair.)
- What did everyone learn? (Big or small, we can use what we have to help others.)

Point out that the answer to the last question is the author’s message. Help students think about how this message applies to other stories they have read, and to their own lives.

Convey a Message, Lesson, or Moral
30–45 minutes

Connect to Writing  Ask students to think of a lesson they would want to teach a younger sibling or friend. You might suggest lessons about telling the truth or being nice to one another. Tell them to write their lesson at the top of a piece of lined paper. Then have them each craft a brief story that effectively conveys their lesson. If students need additional support, you might organize them in pairs or small groups to brainstorm. Invite volunteers to share their stories with the class, and discuss the lessons in each story.

Check for Understanding

What was the main character’s problem?
How did that problem get solved?
Did you think the character did the right or wrong thing?
What did we learn from this example? |
